

Our trees are worth protecting

Ready today, resilient tomorrow.

bioweek.org.au

Biosecurity starts with you

From the native trees in backyards, parks and forests that you love, to the timber resources we rely on, biosecurity protects Australia's natural environment.

National Biosecurity Week serves an important reminder that biosecurity is essential in protecting our native trees, forests and green spaces.

This annual event highlights the collaborative efforts of government, industry peak bodies and the community in safeguarding Australia from exotic plant pests and diseases.

By raising awareness and encouraging the adoption of good biosecurity practices, National Biosecurity Week strives to protect our natural environment.

Simple actions make a difference.
Start at bioweek.org.au

