

One Country One Health

It takes every one of us to protect Australia

bioweek.org.au

Biosecurity starts with you

From the food on your plate to the people and places you love, biosecurity protects what matters.

National Biosecurity Week serves an important reminder that the health of our people, animals, plants and environment is interconnected.

This annual event highlights the collaborative efforts of government, industry peak bodies and the community in safeguarding Australia from exotic pests and diseases.

By promoting shared action and the adoption of good biosecurity practices, National Biosecurity Week helps safeguard Australia.

Simple actions make a difference.
Start at bioweek.org.au

